There is absolutly no denying that options helped last year, theres absolutly not doubt in my smooth brain that options will help this year.

That being said, BE CAREFUL!

Option trading, as you should all know by now, has the potential for infinite losses. If you cant cover these losses within the time allotted, THEY CAN AND WILL FORCE LIQUIDATION.

I'm saying this again so theres no misconceptions, OPTIONS HELPED AND HAVE HUGE POTENTIAL TO HELP.

But, if say 1/5 of holders decide to try options, and SHFs, MMs, or Prime brokers decide to manipulate the price (reference the GME chart this past year) and leave even just 1/5 of the 1/5 of holders, they can and will liquidate that 1/10 of holders who hod screwed.

>Again, Options can provide the pressure the stock needs to ignite the boosters on the rocket

This is absolutly not financial advice, is intended for educational purposes only, and is in no way for entertainment. I am, hopefully just like you, a human. In being human, I have a higher probability of mistakes than machines, and in such everything I say in both this post and any other interaction involving me (or anyone for that matter) should be taken with a grain of salt.
