When this video was made in the late 1960's, these brave and honorable men and women stood up for their rights and the rights of all black Americans. They lived in a country where they were told that everyone was equal, yet they had to beg and fight for the basic human rights that most of us now take for granted, but that should never be taken for granted.

We are living in a time when the top 10 percent of Americans own over 70% of the wealth, and the top 1% own 33% of the wealth in this country. This is due in large part to corporate stock ownership. The bottom 50% of the population in The United States of America, the richest country in the world, holds 2% of the wealth! According to Wikipedia, "The gap between the wealth of the top 10% and that of the middle class is over 1,000%; that increases another 1,000% for the top 1%." In a 2017 Oxfam study, it was found that 8 people, 6 of them Americans, own as much combined wealth as half the people on Earth. "A September 2014 study by Harvard Business School) declared that the growing disparity between the very wealthy and the lower and middle classes is no longer sustainable."

GME Ape brothers and sisters, we are fighting for financial equality, for fair and free markets that benefit everyone, not just the top 1%. Holding our shares is a revolt against the tyranny of the super wealthy who would like to take everything from us. They would like to see us naked and starving and dying in the streets, and they would still not be satisfied with their wealth! Their greed is insatiable. They want everything and more, and they will take it from you, and they will take it from your children, and they will tell you to go fucking die somewhere where your stench won't offend them.

We will never give up! We will fight them because our lives and our futures depend on what we do now. I am a blue collar worker, but my little son deserves to have opportunities, to have rights, to have healthcare, and to have an education. I am a blue collar worker, and after spending my life working hard every day for decades, I deserve to have something to show for my labors. They want us to sell our shares, and they will and they do try every dirty trick in the book to force us to sell. They need our shares, because they fucked up royally. We are not going to give them what they want! It is time for us to take back what they have systematically stolen from us, from our parents, and from our grandparents, and when this is over, they will never steal from us again! We need a better world for all people. "Everybody's got a right to live." Amen!

I disagree with the title. There is anger, but there is no rage. Rage implies irrationality, and there is no irrationality in their words.
