This is basically excess cash being deposited by banks. Some people have said that it's not coming from banks....but YES it is. Money market funds still have to put their extra cash in banks! Every time a share of GME is sold short by a hedge fund whether it's an illegal naked short or a legal put, these hedge funds collect the money up Front!!! And we know they are not covering and they love FTD's. So they have literally just been collecting money for a year or so to the tune of probably about $1.9 trillion +/- (probably +). I read that hedge funds put this extra $$$ in money market accounts bc it's the safest place for it. BECAUSE the extra $$$ is really a liability to the hedge funds! So the money market funds end up with extra cash deposits into their banks...you follow yet? Yep then banks trade this extra cash for U.S. Treasuries!

I have yet to read any argument that correctly disputes this.

Thoughts???

EDIT: I would post to superstonk but I'm still banned for posting my GME position (which I technically did not at that time). But....I am up to 2,783 shares now. LFG!

EDIT: I keep seeing this get downvoted, which is only confirms that someone doesn't want people to see this! FUCK YOU skills, fuck every hedge fund, fuck the sec, fuck the dtcc, and congress bc they are all corrupt! I'm a hardcore republican and I trust no one in any government position with any type of authority (and republicans are probably a bigger part of the corruption with Wall Street than democrats).

Happy New Year!
