Hey Apes,

So I've just started digging into this shit due to some previously read stellar DD about companies profiting off defaults that I will link here, it's essential. READ IT NOW: https://www.reddit.com/r/Superstonk/comments/np33hr/amazon_bain_capital_and_citadel_bust_out_the/

I wanted to see if there was any obvious collusion between these and the hilarious BCG, a quick google gives you a list of employees in BC that have come directly from BCG:

I know it's just people changing jobs within the same sector, but still.

Here's the Wikipedia download:

Bain Capital:

In 1973, another momentous event occurred, shifting the balance in the management consulting world forever.

Bill Bain left his post as Vice President at BCG to form Bain & Company, the third pillar in the MBB empire.

The break was anything but pretty. The war eventually settled, but not without casualties for BCG –

Bain had run off with 2 of BCG's biggest clients, Black & Decker and Texas Instruments.

The Bain-Romney Link:

After he received a joint Juris Doctor and Master of Business Administration from Harvard University in 1975, Mitt Romney was recruited by several firms and chose to remain in Massachusetts to work for Boston Consulting Group (BCG), reasoning that working as a management consultant to a variety of companies would better prepare him for a future position as a chief executive. He was part of a 1970s wave of top graduates who chose to go into consulting rather than join a major company directly.

Why would you directly go into consulting eh? is it cause it's easier to drain from other companies instead of running them yourself?

I'll slowly add to this post the more I dig up, GME gogo power rangers!
