The title says everything. I am actually stupid enough to have all my shares still in Etoro. last year I took a gap year and could save up a shit ton of money to pour into GME, absolutely the best decision I've made all my life... except... I've bought everything on Etoro because my friends where using it.

Now for a very, very long time I kept telling myself that whatever the case: i would never sell. If i wanted more shares I would buy them elsewhere, but no selling on Etoro to DRS. The sad part is, after my gap year, i went back to school. And I have to pay school myself and it is already almost bankrupting me. I simply can't afford to add more shares on another broker and DRS there.

I feel like GME could pop off every second and I'm not sure what to do right now.

Anyone got some advice for me? I live in the Netherlands, maybe other apes have had the same situation with these stupid europoor broker.

I have stayed in zen modus for literally the past year. I want to get some help before i lose my cool the minute this thing starts. thanks!
