

Title: Speculation of an Ape

Author: Waste_Surround5495

Created 2022-07-02 08:04:54 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/vpmra3/speculation_of_an_ape/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/vpmra3/speculation_of_an_ape/

Hi Apes,

Just some late night ramblings of an Ape that doesn't know things good but sometimes gets lucky with speculation and retarded TA. Please excuse the incoherentness.

1. 153 was the top of the May run because that is exactly where the price action met with the trending resistance. They had to stop it there to avoid having additional retail FOMO and losing control again. 115 was the support because it was historically strong and the anticipation of the splidend was getting strong, retail was buying more, and GME beat revenue expectations. Again, a lucky guess. Slowly but surely, we have been raising the floor and we haven't seen 115 again. This is in part due to nearly constant ITM call buying and instantaneous exercising (credit to Gherk for pointing this out to me and other pickle lickers). But who was buying calls and exercising them? My guess is that it was one or more of the funds that are heavily short the stock. They have run out of funds due to decreased liquidity to short it and don't want to buy at market to close their FTDs so they pass it off to none other than the market makers with the super powers they have to deal with it more "effectively". I believe I read somewhere we have been at 100% utilization for something like 100 days so it stands to reason that they are in a hurry to avoid drowning now and to clear all the FTDs possible ASAP while keeping the volume on tape low. Don't expect prices to fall below 115 except it is the actual dip before a rip and consider keeping some cash on the sidelines for if and when that happens.

2. A few weeks ago... or maybe months ago (time all mixes together for us Apes) we saw some environmental filing coming from GameStop saying that they source all their dangerous material ethically and as sustainably as possible. This filing brought up a lot of questions and I think the consensus was that it had to do with their merchandise suppliers. I disagree because the GMErica patent / trademark (whatever) was just approved a few days ago and stated that they will be selling a list of things which I forgot what was on it except clothing. They already sell clothes and other things, why create a new brand when they are already effectively fulfilling the market need with stylish and comfortable clothing. My guess, is they are moving manufacturing of a lot of the things they sell in house. GMErica branded clothing, collectables, games instead of those made by the likes of Hasbro and Gildan. This should increase profits on these items by at least 10-20%. With all the sales they have been having on clothes it would make sense that they are trying to clear inventory to make room for GMErica branded merchandise. But I don't think there are many hazardous materials used in the production of such merchandise... hazardous materials are however used to make batteries, which we have already seen GameStop branded batteries though (most likely white label). Hazardous materials are also used to create almost all electronics. What electronics could they possibly produce though? How about a new type of gaming console specifically to play NFT based games and simultaneously mines crypto while you play? Even though this would be a killer thing to create, I haven't seen any manufacturing jobs advertised on linked in so let's put this on the back burner on low for now, unless of course, they teamed up with another company that has the staff and facilities required to design and manufacture such a console... I mean the only person I have ever noticed RC to follow on twitter was Elon Musk and such a thing would be right up his alley, especially if it could be integrated with Teslas. Of course, this is beyond fantasy, or is it? Apple could also be a possible partner if they chose to venture in electronic production, after all, he is their largest individual shareholder and they are known for their secrecy programs.

3. Timing is everything. As Apple's largest shareholder, RC no doubt knows the value of secrecy and not divulging products until they are fully able to come to market with developed products that surprise and delight the customer. Looking at the posted chart (laugh at my crappy TA) you can see how depending on the support we maintain the end of the line is going to be either 8/03 or 9/26.... most likely, especially when you factor in the fact we tested the trend line 7 times and they have all been recent. Key strategic partnerships in the NFT space with a near dated launch time and/or device manufacturing announcements should give us the powder to ignite July OPEX settlement week and launch us to an ATH.

Thanks for sitting through my incoherent ramblings.

TLDR.

1. We have been holding above 115 and are testing the trend resistance. I don't think we dip lower until just before the rip.
2. I think GMErica will be producing branded clothing, collectables, and possibly an NFT console.
3. The right announcements/launches/partnerships near July OPEX should launch us to ATH.

<https://preview.redd.it/7of5qla744991.png?width=1710&format;=png&auto;=webp&s;=a6eabac3e85e383e6f0ff4308a5d1d690eba8351>