Ok so Ryan Cohen tweeted about Uranus. Everyone is speculating that today, May 27, something could go down since Uranus has 27 moons.

I was interested to know more about the moons, because I felt like there was something there to uncover....

So Uranus' most interesting moon is Miranda. Scientists are fascinated with the texture of it, etc. It's the smallest of the 5 major moons.

So then I look up if Miranda has any sort of context in the financial world, and it appears that debt collectors must read you your "mini-Miranda rights" when they come calling.

Are we getting some margin calls today?!

Smallest of main moons... Mini Miranda.

Tits jacked. Let's go to Urrraaannnnuuussss.
