Listen up kids.. The first few decades of the 21 century was an interesting one for financial markets especially after 2021. For nearly 40 years, prior the elite convinced the public in something called the "Trickle down" Economics, despite 40 years of rising inflation, crashing the housing market, and other evidence to the contrary. We convinced the public that bailouts and socialism only existed for corporations, but individuals needed "personal responsibility " , and were just not smart enough to properly invest their money. We labeled them communists and socialists without any need to distinguish between the two. A few corporations were busted when they tried to control the weather but largely the criminal enterprise that was the US financial markets continued with Reckless abandon with the occasional slap on the wrist and a stern look from the SEC.

Then GME happened ..
