

Title: Post-MOASS Endgame- The biggest thing we need to be on the lookout for after this all plays out
Author: dangerous_dylan
Created 2021-07-06 11:50:46 UTC
Permalink: /r/Autisticats/comments/oetcej/postmoass_endgame_the_biggest_thing_we_need_to_be/
Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/Autisticats/comments/oetcej/postmoass_endgame_the_biggest_thing_we_need_to_be/
Is_self: True

Body:

I have been diving very deeply into conspiracies for a long time. Through a combination of research and my own personal experiences, I have come to hold many beliefs that even those of you with the wildest theories would probably dismiss as crazy.

I'm not going to go in to all of that, but one thing we should all be able to agree on is, the powers that be have a goal to suppress humanity, and they do everything in their power to keep us enslaved.

This is something we all must keep in mind moving forward, when this is over. But before I get into that, we need to have a quick lesson on infiltration, and what it means.

These puppet masters are experts in infiltration. It is their most commonly used tactic to fight anything that they do not want to gain traction, and knowing what to look for is the first step to fighting it.

Infiltration can occur in several different ways- I will detail the two most common methods that are seen, but this is not an exhaustive list.

The first method is by using what have come to be known around here as "shills". Before the term "shills" became popular, it was referred to as "astroturfing"- a reference to fake "grass" being planted amongst grassroots movements.

This is not people coming in and being intentionally confrontational/ contradictory.
I firmly believe anyone doing that is no more than a bored troll, looking for a reaction, and I will explain why.

True astroturfing is more subtle, and is textbook manipulation. They will feed you tons of confirmation bias, and you will agree with nearly everything they say. HOWEVER, there will be something thrown in there- something small, subtle- and it is meant to plant a seed. This seed will then be watered through a combination of confirmation bias and more subtle means, until eventually you come to hold an idea that you BELIEVE you came to on your own, but is actually exactly what they wanted you to think.

One recent example of this is all of the Russell 1000 hype- sure, we saw some slight movement, but it was nothing near what many had come to expect. However, if you had dug into how the R1000 rebalances are done, you would have found that while there is large trade volume tied to it, the participating parties work out deals in advance to mitigate the effect they have on stock prices- which is exactly what we saw occur after hours on rebalance day.

The second most common method of infiltration is different, but often occurs simultaneously.

When something that goes against their goals is identified as gaining traction in a sub-group of people, there will inevitably be a push towards something else that appears to be similar, but is actually under their control. They will push this more and more, in an attempt to divert attention away from the original, and towards the new- which, like I said, they actually have complete control over.

An example of this that most of you will be familiar with, is AMC. I don't need to go in to all of the red flags there, because I'm sure you have seen them as well, but it is undeniable that AMC, while on the surface appears to be an extension of the GME movement, is actually an entirely different beast.

...

Now that we have that out of the way, let's talk about what I believe we should be on the lookout for when this is all over, and my personal prediction.

A huge majority of GME investors have lofty goals, and aim to use their newfound wealth to bring about positive change to the world post-MOASS. While this is an admirable goal, these apes are going to be huge targets for manipulation, and there will be massive infiltration into any movements that come about.

My most bold prediction of what will occur (specifically in the US) is this-

The division between left and right will not only continue to grow, it will kick off in an exponential manner. This will be intentional- because the goal is not to actually bring about either the far-left or far-right ideas- the goal will be to set the field for a third party to come around that will take advantage of the financial rebalance that has occurred.

This third party will be a wolf in sheep's clothing. They will preach all of the right words, in an attempt to win the support of all the new money that wants to make the world a better place.

They will then use that money to promote their platform (the biggest hindrance to third parties is ALWAYS money,) and they will play off of the even larger divide they have created between left and right to win the support of everyone in the world that just wants something "reasonable".

If their plan is successful, they will then be in a position to establish complete control (again) over what is currently on the verge of slipping from their grasp. This third party will continue to preach the right words, but behind the scenes, they will be subtly pushing things that are detrimental to the people.

This may take several election cycles to fully implement. These puppet masters use time to their advantage, and they like to slowly weasel their way in to things.

This is their fallback plan, and as they realize more and more that MOASS is inevitable, they are beginning to take steps towards its implementation. This is why we have started to see some (although still very little) positive representation of GME in main stream media.

But Dr Danger, what can we do about this??

I'm glad you asked, other Dylan.

The first step, and the biggest thing we all can and MUST do, is fight against the forced division. They're teaching us to hate each other, and we must not allow that. Do not fall victim to hatred, and do everything you can to be kind- especially to people you disagree with.

The next step is to ensure we perform extensive vetting towards anything we put our money towards- and do not be afraid to speak out against the masses if there is any cause for concern.

With the huge amount of research I see being performed around here, I have nothing but confidence in our ability to do the second part- but we MUST remember what infiltration is and how it is done, we MUST be on the lookout for it, and we will have to learn how to help others identify it.

Ultimately, I have faith in all of us, but I also have concern over how easy it has appeared to be for them to manipulate certain sentiments on the biggest subreddits. We must actively promote kindness, and stay ever vigilant.

Have a great day everyone, and I hope you've taken some value from this

■■■■■■■■■■