So i have 2 CASH accounts 1 in Webull 1 in TD Ameritrade

Trading with SETTLED funds..

On my webull account i can enter an options trade and sell same option same day and i will have unsettled funds but they are available to enter a new position..

Today on TD Ameritrade i bought GME weekly $111 calls for 2.60 and sold for 9.00 .. my funds were not available for trade to enter any new position..

I called TD Ameritrade and asked why are my funds not available to enter a new trade.. the manager came to the phone and told me "because the buy side of the order has not cleared" is why my funds are not available to trade with and are locked up.. i told the manager that on my Webull account i can enter a trade exit that same trade and enter a new trade. 3 transactions completed with SETTLED funds to start the 3 transactions.. buy sell buy....

The manager of TD Ameritrade said he has never heard of that before unless you are on margin account.. i am not on Margin account i am both CASH accounts.. he replied with that sounds fishy and they shouldn't be able to do that..

Soooo my question to the smooth brains is this..

Is TD Ameritrade fucking me from 3 transactions on day trade with settled funds..

OR

Is Webull doing shady shit with peoples orders like an i got you system and i should be worried and close my account..

One of these 2 books is wronging me.. either TDA is holding my funds hostage or Webull is involved in illegal trading practices..

Thanks for any help..
