I've been looking and I can't find the answer, so maybe an ape knows. When a company does a stock split, how does that affect non-distributed shares? We know it splits all shares outstanding, but what about those other shares that the company hasn't distributed? Do those shares get split, stay the same, or get reduced (I feel like "get reduced" would be the wrong answer). So for GME, our company's non-distributed shares were reduced because we filed paperwork for a split via dividend. Since the DCC did crime or something, would our company get those shares back, if that is how a strait up split works? Am I just dumb?
