> Nomi Prins is a geopolitical financial expert and investigative journalist who sheds light on the dark corners of the global economy.

> She quit her job on Wall St to become a journalist and a bit of a whistle-blower. She was a managing director at Goldman Sachs, ran the international analytics group as a senior managing director at Bear Stearns in London, and worked as a strategist at Lehman Brothers and analyst at the Chase Manhattan Bank.

> She became an investigative reporter to clarify the methods by which monetary systems (like the central banks/Federal reserve) are manipulated to serve the interests of an elite few at the expenditure of everybody else.

> As with all of our guests, she was really impressed by the community's questions, so thank you to anyone who left a well thought-out question on the question thread.

Note:

- **The entire AMA is definitely worth watching, but just noting that Nomi Prins focuses specifically on GameStop / GME at the 46:09 minute mark**
