If you were Ryan Cohen, what would you do tomorrow?

Discussion

Suppose you were Ryan Cohen. After buying your $GME shares in the fall of 2020, you've waited 1.5 years for your stand-still terms to expire. During that time, your investment skyrocketed in value, became a global conversation starter, and was the subject of excruciating volumes of white collar crime and misinformation.

Other than the occasional twitter indulgence, you've been dead silent, watching, waiting and biding your time. You have the option to end that silence and/or increase your investment at the expiry of your stand-still agreement, believed to be February 9th, 2022.

What would you do?

Tweet an ambiguous reference about Loopring to make that u/cryptocached clown lose his shit.

To be fair, Ryan and/or other LIGMA staff could be using reddit accounts to drop breadcrumbs along the way and we would never know.

  Buckle up

Want me to really blow your mind?

Knowledge of the pinata.cloud connection originally came (to me, at least) by way of the Loopring GitHub "leaks".

That kind of makes RC's tweet an ambiguous reference about Loopring.
