GME/DRS/BROKER: Good morning. I recently spoke to a lady named Shanine (sha-neen) at CS. I have all of my shares for both stocks in ComputerShare. With all of the concern regarding sell limits, I wanted to know what happens if I send some shares from CS back to my broker for ease and flexibility of selling during the rocket ride. She told me that she's not sure how my broker would handle it but that my shares would still remain in the direct registration book entry form and in my name even after the transfer back to my broker. Does anybody know if this would mean that the broker could not screw me because there's proof that the shares are MINE via the intact direct registration records and therefor much safer to resend to my broker when the time is near? Would anybody else in this sub be willing to call CS themselves and see if you get the same answer that I did? Just curious and trying to determine the best and most hassle free way to prepare and be ready. Thanks as always for any feedback. I haven't seen this discussed yet so, if it has been, it would be more helpful to direct me to that discussion instead of talking shit about how this has already been discussed and that only a paid s*ill would keep asking. Much appreciated!
