Is_self: False

As I understand it, If GME issues a cash dividend, then it will be up to DTCC to distribute the dividend to each GME share on its books.

And even if there are more shares in the market than outstanding shares (or is it just the shares in the float which are eligible for dividends?) due to naked shorting, DTCC will dip into its own funds and distribute the dividend.

My question is then, are there any publicly accessible record which shows the particulars of the dividend distribution by the DTCC such as exactly how much was paid out in total or to how many shares the dividend was sent out?

I apologize in advance since this is not exactly GME only relevant question, but more of a general stock market question, but I think most if you know why I'm asking this question.

Thank you for your time and courtesy in advance.
