HOW IT BEGAN

"I can't do this alone" were the words posted by Tendieman that began a conversation that led to an underground awareness about GME being the play against Wall Street corruption. I am Tendieman, so those were my words.

Tendieman became legend, but I am not posting here to receive glory. I am here to renew the awareness of origin and purpose as a new year begins.

The first words may be interpreted many ways. We can see by the amount of participation on reddit that defense of GME against unscrupulous capital controllers requires stalwart action by people around the world investing in GameStop and demanding righteous justice. The first words could be interpreted to refer to this massive effort. It would not be a wrong interpretation, but a perfected understanding would interpret that the power of action must be passed to those who will do the work.

I did "invest" in GME with one call option contract to provide image proof for a reddit post of a long investment opinion and to serve as a sample for those with a position building strategy using option profits; however, I realized prior to those first words that I cannot go with you on that journey to the moon for a few valid reasons, the most important being that I did not want to jeopardize your success by putting into question whether it was a scheme to enrich myself. I had the knowledge to give to you freely to do as you choose. Thank you for remembering. To those who chose to lead, thank you for being a torch bearer. To everyone, thank you for choosing righteous justice. Thank you for persisting and continuing to spread the good word.

Tendieman was not a name that I used until now. Someone in that first conversation suggested that Tendieman is how I should be referred to as awareness spread, and others agreed. The conversation happened on youtube, and my username there was The1cn. That account was deleted shortly afterward along with all other Google accounts, because of Google's (then) newly emerging repressive content controls.

The video that the initiating conversation was posted to might still exist, but the conversation is gone as far as I know; potentially saved only by daily snapshot servers owned by Google, the CIA, or the NSA. It was a video promoted as a MGTOW (Men Going Their Own Way) source. MGTOW creators often presented the acronym as a tag to advertise as a space for males who felt disaffected by the shift in social paradigms that occurred over the past several decades. Obviously, the growing viewership alarmed political thinkers, who perceived it as a threat to their goals. There were certainly viewers of MGTOW content who shared unhealthy thoughts, as any internet communication space will have, but the MGTOW space was predominantly about coping. The generally shared idea among popular MGTOW presenters was acceptance of life as it is by shifting viewers' mental focus from blame seeking to self actualization with healthy personal goals. Nevertheless, the openness of MGTOW as a domain for new perception became a beacon for bad actors and an easy point of attack for establishmentarians and political desperados.

Watching the well crafted destruction of MGTOW on youtube as facilitated by Google executives made me want to do more to help those who sought a new way forward without falling prey to the self destructive aspects of anger, shame, disenfranchisement, or other manipulations that establishmentarians employ, but I was just one little person with no significant influence in a big world fashioned for the sake of "the big club."

The conversation went something like this. Those first words quoted from the conversation asked for help from others to join a cause. After inquiry by others, I complained about the investment market being given to the shorts, because a rule had just passed that allowed unhinged naked shorting by removing the effectiveness of the short-sale rule, which prevented shorting on a down tick. That rule was undermined in 2007, but a similar crutch was later added and removed. Of course, there were more problems, but that was the last straw for me. More became interested in the conversation, and they asked how help could be rendered. I told of a coming global threat in the first quarter of 2020 by which millions would plausibly die, and a market drop following its acknowledgement. One person replied that the details given seemed like I was talking about a coming pandemic, and implored me to tell an appropriate authority if I knew something. {What they didn't know is that a warning was already given long ago, more than once. The proper authorities never informed any of you did they? I assume that it is because they did not trust the nature of the source - prescience.} Then I told of naked shorters becoming too emboldened by the lax regulations, causing one stock to be shorted more than 100%, bringing the mother of all short squeezes after the economic recovery effort took place in 2021. One of the replies asked if GME might be the ticker, and I affirmed that GME was the play. One of the replies suggested that Keith Gill should be notified and asked to spread the word, since he was already covering GME as one stock, but, because of my concern about establishmentarians using corrupt legal means to destroy the integrity of this cause for justice, as was done to the MGTOW domain on youtube during that time, I suggested that Keith Gill should not be told to allow plausible deniability as a legitimate defense against corrupt powers. Others agreed. So, this began as an attempt to empower MGTOW participants with financial gains from MOASS with a prescient warning about the coming pandemic, market drop, social restabilization effort, and economic recovery plan. There was some back and forth about a closer date for when MOASS would happen, but I could not predict that, nor the flagrant corruption used to prevent it without societal upheaval correcting that corruption.

Let me be clear. This was never a divisively political initiative, nor was it meant to advantage only certain groups of people. The initial information was given to anyone who viewed that conversation with an expectation that it would spread to anyone willing to hear the message of hope. It was for viewers to decide individually. It was their work (investment and information sharing) that would enable them to profit. It was a truly decentralized and unorganized attempt to financially empower people who wanted the right kind of change. I believed that they would all be protected from false accusations by corrupt powers with the information about the pandemic and excessive short interest. They didn't concoct a pandemic. They didn't cause greater than 100% short interest. They acted on information made public through a public source to buy and hold a stock that they liked. The initiating conversation exposed here happened (if memory serves) in 2017 or 2018. That information would prove true in 2020 and 2021 exactly as told. Think about that.

WHAT NOW?

Be circumspect in action; meaning, think and behave as if guided by the understanding that others always judge your value as someone who represents a good or bad virtue, ranging from something notable to something iconic. Do not be persuaded by this awareness to conform to others' imperfect expectations, but utilize this awareness for presence praxis while displaying self expression true and purposefully.

Never forget that this is your cause for justice; as individuals; as a group of people similarly interested and self directed. As always, it only happens with your contribution. Recognize what piece you are in the puzzle. You do have power to further empower yourself. No one can do it all alone.

Lastly, you should realize that part of this post is to prepare you for the degree of harm that corrupt powers will pursue to destroy GME as an open invitation effort to destroy them. Corruption is bane to the health of all societies. It is righteous to oppose corruption. Every weakness in your psyche will be tested. The most powerful that you have been trained throughout life to respond to is apathy. Their greatest weapons will attempt to dissuade you with disinterest or dissociation. This is ultimately a power struggle between people who believe that they have the privilege to reshape society by whim versus the dynamo of collective consciousness; the supranationals versus the people. {The term "supranationals" was used here as a noun.}

This effort was never about me or anyone who became a recognized character in the GameStop saga. Not influencers. Not mods. Not GameStop officials. This effort has been about what you want. A college instructor once told me that every well written character has one great flaw, and that the purpose of it was to make the character relatable. I don't believe that. If you look at the transition of characters who passed the torch in this GME story, then you will see that stepping aside (by will or by rejection) made space for others to step up. It is a way to convince and encourage the witness to the unfolding story that they also can be the hero or torch bearer. "I can't do this alone." Now, repeat after me, "I am Tendieman."
