Achieved a new level of zen today. RC and GME don't need the SEC. They don't need the DTCC. They don't need one big announcement to trigger MOASS.

We're living the MOASS right now.

This company has been working hard all year to make little changes everyday. Building a solid foundation first. BRICK by BRICK.

They've increased sales, improved customer service and fulfillment efforts. They've increased their catalog of products, and created a strong brand voice that their target audience have really enjoyed engaging with.

This holiday season, they had lines out the door in many stores. And now they're opening up the NFT marketplace for creators.

This is not the same company from a year ago. The narrative of "dying brick and mortar with no fundamentals" is now truly a delusion.

Everyday, the perception of GameStop is improving. Not just among apes who are invested. But among everyday consumers.

Over time, with more positive customer experiences, will come more people who trust and are willing to invest and do business with this great company.

They're showing people everyday that they are more than a meme. Always has been.
