Hey, Apes.

Back in early January I made a post asking apes if they would be interested in a narration type style of popular GameStop DD. I am ADHD, and have an easier time understanding things by hearing it rather than reading it. Since no one out there is really doing that, I decided to do it myself. I launched my first video about a month ago.

It received quite the positive feedback, I went to bed with a smile on my face that night. I also found myself enjoying the creative process as well. So, for this video, in addition to not only providing narration, I took some creative liberties to make the video a bit more entertaining by ingraining some of my personality/humor, rather than just targeting a dry educational audible-esque vibe.

I would appreciate any feedback, this is my first time attempting anything like this. I am rather new to the video editing process, and I know the narration itself isn't quite the best, and neither is the editing. But, I have to be frank, I am very proud of what came out regardless of my lack of skill. I put quite a bit of effort into this, so I hope it doesn't fall flat on the community, as I would love to continue to make more of these kinda videos.

Thanks for reading, & thank you u/ catbulliesdog for the DD. I chose your DD because it was the most popular one of the month and I wanted it to reach an even wider audience, or help people digest more info out of it. Also, I couldn't have made the video as funny as it was with out the jokes already being written in. Love ya.
