Off the top of my head:

WuTang had an album named once upon a time in shaolin that is not to be monetized before 2109. It was the only one and copy of its kind. A PieceofS won it in an auction then got jailed later so it was sold again. A group known for NFT brought it, and it was theorized RC joined in a project of theirs cause the anon guy wears a hoodie backwards covering his face, that looks like RC's hoodie. RC also has a friend that follows them or something so it is very likely they are acquaintances.

The album is split ownership between 74 people?

Theory is, the rights or copies will be broken into fragment and will be used for nft dividends. Since the law prevents it from being monetized w/e they can't put a value to it as a replacement so hedgies be fcked.

It fits perfectly, but also seems far-fetched so I am still cautious and doubtful, but also hopeful cause it'll be real cool.

edited: the purchase of it by the NFT group was either April or July of this year. Made some news recently, not sure if it's cause that's when they announced that it was them who brought it.

Buckle Up

Is this the mysterious 741 connection? 74 people, owning the 1 album 🤔

3 2 Countdown Guy 1

Could that also be why RC's latest tweet in front of Gamestop looks kinda like a hip-hop album cover? And in the background there's the 741 connection again?
