So the failure to deliver warehouse right is where any trades not settled get sent right. So every short that doesn't have a locate right so they space out and slowly deliver ftds to the warehouse to avoid reg sho because they are "taken care of" in a sense but if they are taking trades and not fulfilling delivery it's theft!!! Now the dtcc runs Ftd warehouse and collects the premium on the ftds.. WHAT!!! They get paid to store crime!!!! Short hedge fund cheats retail by shorting into oblivion and cellar boxing companies dtcc makes money off ftds!!! Effectively getting a kickback of the crime!!!!

sec generally only takes cases they can win and slap relatively tiny fines (compared to potential damages) because that's how the sec gets paid. Why prevent crime when you only get paid after someone gets caught. The bigger the crime they let happen the bigger their check no? Sec is supposed to regulate markets then what do market makers do that's right they control the price by using billions of dollars in both leverage and special privileges.

Oh boy I can't wait to see what's behind the curtain of 100% drs GME away from what is possibly the most corrupt legalized theft ring called the US markets
If anything I said is wrong let me know
