I will admit to being horrendously late for the GME-Bus. I only started reading the DD in Dec, but since then I have been spending what cash I can free up on GME and am up to 33 shares. DRS started this week from IBKR for my first share.

What I am astounded by is the number of individual events that I have been party to observing in such a short time, that I can't quite believe what the experience of those who were engaged in this thing since the start have seen.

The AH fuckery, the Shit-shilling by the MSM, what appears to be absolute fear from the SHF's about DRS and Apex's shithouse move on retirement plans, all only in the last few weeks.

Its a bit of a pain to be buying based in NZ, I am awake till Pre-Market and can also see Germany open, but I have to rely on limits for the first few hours of the day, when the bargains abound. That said, in 6 weeks I have grown to look forward excitedly to the morning and keeping track of what happening with all of this - it is fucking fascinating for an autist like me.

Anyway, this has turned into a longer post than I was expecting, but I will finish with this - thanks to all who post the DD and thanks to all who post their insight and thanks to all who post memes and other funny shit: Hedgies r fuk
