

Title: Sticking Up For The Company I And You Are Part Owners Of Out In The Wilderness Of Reddit.
Power To The Players.

Author: Deluxeejuice

Created 2022-06-04 04:33:02 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/v4h6v7/sticking_up_for_the_company_i_and_you_are_part/

Url: <https://i.redd.it/682yyj2t8j391.png>

So you're telling me all the top execs from the biggest company's that are making millions are just leaving to join gamestop on a whim for stock incentives only? Think about this a minute before continuing.

If gme wasn't a big deal, you wouldn't be hearing about it. There's a reason the sec is making fun of it. They want the people unaware to stay out. Everybody knows the media is full of shit.

Why is it only with gme that when the stock rises you don't hear about it in the news. Or when the stock rises, the alerts on your brokerages don't notify you. The only time I get notifications is on the down swing. Ask yourself if gme no longer matters, why are they still talking about it and trying to get you to sell? Did they warn you about sears? Did they warn you about blockbuster or toys r us? So why gme.

You have a stock dividend split in the coming weeks. They have over 1 billion cash in reserve. They just launched their Gamestop Wallet with 5 star reviews. The nearest competition is metamask in that department with only a 3.5 rating. They have nearly a billion in inventory built up on top of the billion plus cash reserve. They are launching their NFT market place this quarter. Possibly even their own block chain exchange. As you can see, they have a ravenous shareholder base.

Add a comment