After this morning I thought we were finally in for an exciting trading day in GME again. It is now back to its same old minimal action that it has had for months. I miss the early days where $10 price swings in minutes was just a normal thing that no one made a big deal of. It used to be my daily dose of entertainment whether it was big dips or spikes at least it was exciting. This trading sideways for months in end with slow gains and slow losses has been a yawn fest. Let's get some real volatility going.
