If there are 123,456 registered stockholders (most of whom probably don't have their entire position yet on CS) on the most niche, unmarketed, boomer platform in Computershare, imagine how many more there are on popular platforms!

Computershare is undeniably an niche thing that only reddit mostly knows about.

I saw etoro has 90k GME investors,

Fidelity probably has millions of investors

Fuck Robinthehood and Webullshit probably still have tens of thousands of GME investors

I am more convinced than ever that retail owns multiple floats.
