Replying to @peruvian_bull

Bloomberg Economics estimates that policy makers in the G7 countries will shrink their balance sheets by about $410B in the remainder of 2022.

It's a stark turnaround from last year, when they added $2.8T — taking the total expansion to more than $8T since Covid-19 arrived.

The Fed is expected to raise rates by 50 basis points at its May 3 to 4 policy meeting and several times thereafter, with traders seeing about 250 basis points of tightening between now and year's end.

Officials are also expected to start trimming the balance sheet at a maximum pace of $95 billion a month, a quicker shift than most envisaged at the start of the year."
