

Title: Selling shares on ComputerShare on the downtrend of MOASS?

Author: amahtez

Created 2021-09-22 17:51:25 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/ptcz0z/selling_shares_on_computershare_on_the_downtrend/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/ptcz0z/selling_shares_on_computershare_on_the_downtrend/

I keep seeing FUD being posted and the misinformation is rampant regarding transferring your shares with ComputerShare and the selling of these shares towards the downward peak of MOASS.

Can anyone verify if these rumors are true or false and provide data, this post on this subreddit can answer these questions which could provide clarity to the thousands that lurk this subreddit.

1.) Is it true I can't sell my shares for over $1M?

2.) Is selling as hard as others have claimed it to be? (I've seen post saying phone calls and written letters may be necessary and it could take days to sell a single share)

3.) Is it true the servers can crash and the customer service line would be not usable due to the mass amounts of overwhelming calls in the Midst of MOASS causing some of us to potentially miss out on millions?

Please if anyone has the information and knowledge regarding these questions, please answer. I'm with fidelity and have been scared to transfer to CS because these concerns scare me along with so much varying opinions on CS. I want to DRS but i don't want to lose millions with that specific transfer agent/ brokerage.