Question about the so called, "Fidelity clerical error." Did Fidelity actually lend out those 12 million shares to shorts? Someone told me that the volume was 2 million all day that day, so this proves that Fidelity did not lend out those shares b/c if they did lend them out then the volume would have been higher. Is this true? Does the fact that the volume was 2 million all day prove that Fidelity did not lend out the shares and it was just a clerical error as they state? Note: I am too dumb to know where to look to see what the volume was that day, so I am just taking this person's word that the volume was in fact 2 million that day. Need wrinkle brains to get to the bottom of this.
