For some context I'm a January 2021 ape. I had Robbingthehood like so many other degenerates. I also use a platform called Stash. When they (Robbingeverybody) turned off the buy button, I was still able to buy on Stash.

After reading about how sketchy the investing world is, I opened accounts on TD, Webull, Cash App and Etrade. I read so many posts/comments about how trading platforms lent shares, and buying through certain brokerages wouldn't see a lit market and effect the price, that I thought it was best to spread the pie around on multiple sites.

I fully left Robbingusblind in March. Since then, even though I thought buying through multiple brokers would help the cause, I now see that the key to squashing some of the financial manipulation around GME is to direct register my shares.

The question is, am I wrong for wanting to wait to see four or five digit share prices before I DRS? I intend to have the majority of my shares forever dipping their balls in the infinity pool, so needing to sell doesn't matter much to me.

Each and every one of these brokers took my money, and it's unlikely that they purchased a single share from the market for me. They robbed me of my money and it's all fun and games until you fuck a stranger in the ass (Walter Sobchek reference) and the stranger fucks back.

I want to inflict maximum pain on these dirtbags, and I feel like waiting until we are mid MOASS to DRS is one way that I can rage against the machine. I'm sure these brokers would like me to DRS when the share price is between $100-$200 because they have to locate shares at that price, but they betrayed a fundamental trust by stealing from me, and I don't want to make it easy or cheap for them when it's time to pay the piper.

Either way I'm holding until the price of a single share reads like a telephone number (with area/country code).

I hold for the 2008 bullshit. I hold because I'm sick of being a debt slave. I hold so my kids don't have to worry about fuck all. I hold for each and every one of you. I just want to have as big of an impact as I can as a little guy.
