I posted on April 1 and made a picture (which was later deleted) telling everyone that GME had institutions selling in bulk, but no one seemed to think so at the time.

I remember the closing price of GME on April 1st was around $165, and the closing price of GME today is $128.

Honestly, I think GME's big start on March 22 was the first time this year that institutions have manipulated GME. At that time, GME stock rose 1.5 times for 2 weeks in a row, and then the institutions were sure to flee.

Moreover, the market will decline sharply this year. Economic data says it all, PPI CPI sucks.

Hope everyone is ready. What are your thoughts?
