Y'all, that does NOT mean I don't try and lead the horse to water. I just do not fucking dunk their head in it!

I have my own little subtle ways. I quietly place "bread crumbs" that I hope their subconscious will follow.

* **I start a conversation with the person and try to learn a passion to relate with or the type of person they are and build a relationship with that.**

1. This builds a personal relationship, makes them more receptive to your input.
2. Gives you more insight to their core person to understand even more.
3. I Find something relatable that I can correlate to >Crypto>NFT>Blockchain>Gamestop. (I actually do not mention the stock and wait for a good entry point to start placing my bread crumbs).

* **After I feel i've built an understanding of the individual is when I start to try and relate Crypto or NFT's to a passion.**

1. Whatever one is mentioned first being Crypto or NFT, I always have a lead in to the other. With those two, the individual will at least already have subconsciously absorbed some curiosity from external forces. They will have a hazy "knowledge" of one maybe an actual understanding of it and then no knowledge or understanding of the other (if they already do understand both and not GameStop.... SHEEP). ^(hopefully you know what I mean)

* **Blockchain is always the brick wall they just can't get passed. I do not try and tear down the wall for them. That hurts my lungs and strains my brain and usually makes them feel stupid.** ^("Don't try and explain, when the person won't try and explain to themselves later".)

1. I give them a boost to peak over their mental block (I.E. Pod Cast, Youtube, a Tweet from someone they mentioned) and hopefully see that it might be worth climbing and that is where I place my final bread crumb and basically is a ladder for them to climb on their own. My personal one I like to use is the the Pod Cast Armchair Expert interviewing Mila Kunis & Ashton Kutcher. Who doesn't love That 70's Show? If they do not, they DO NOT deserve a ticket to go to the moon anyways! ■ ■

* **I ask them once then if they've heard about GameStops situation.**

1. Yes or no I just mention NFT.GameStop.com and move on to a lighter topic! No mention of the stock, DSR, market manipulation, shitadel, SEC, 2008... Save your aluminum foil hat for your own DD!

**That is where it ends. All I wanted was to create a healthy subconscious curiosity in Gamestop, towards the direction they understand that in the end takes them to the Moon! Just a simple convo of hopefully relating passions and those passions moving into the future!** ^ (DON'T GET ME WRONG... ONES CLOSE TO ME HAVE BEEN OVERLOADED WITH INFO and deeply fucking annoyed.)
