There were several times where the apes were described as organizing or that there was a movement. I personally disagree with that viewpoint. I come to Reddit to get information so that I can make my own decisions. Gamestop isn't a movement imo. If my actions and the actions of other people that think like I do shines a light on the problems in our flawed financial system then maybe that's just because of the flaws in the system. It's not because I'm part of some movement.

There are so many people that are smarter than me doing DD. There are so many people reading articles and posting about them here. Why wouldn't I take advantage of that to find my information faster and more effectively. I'm just some guy that thinks gamestop is smart to own. I'm just some guy that likes the stock.
