It took me some time before I told anybody that I held shares in GameStop. The few people that I did tell told me I was crazy and that whatever shares I held I should sell. They wouldn't believe how the stock was being manipulated and the potential future of GameStop. Now with the price plummeting, the few people I told are once again texting me and telling me that I should sell. I just decided to tell them that I did sell, because I don't feel like having to explain for the 100th time what is going on with the stock. We all know what is going on, and will hold long term. I'm just curious if there are others out there that also lie to avoid having to explain themselves to people that just won't understand.
