

Title: Clever Trap, But Not Clever Enough

Author: Readingredditanon

Created 2022-01-07 16:58:42 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/ryc1kr/clever_trap_but_not_clever_enough/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/ryc1kr/clever_trap_but_not_clever_enough/

Let me know what you guys think of this explanation for the last 24 hours:

\-GME runs up due to liquidation of a firm (simple explanation for other meme stocks getting a bump in unison).

\-MSM article comes out simultaneously to both pre-emptively attempt to deflate the response to GMEs NFT news as well as offer an explanation for the movement).

\-Big call option push is orchestrated on Superstonk by... interested parties... in order to suck money out from investors who believe this is the MOASS.

\-After the slight run-up, the price is controlled once more and people are on the hook for the money they spent on options.

\-The intent is that morale is hit and they are hoping that investors are shaken loose.

The game's not over—people should be resistant to morale shocks like this by now. The only way they win is by shaking off enough investors with coordinated, orchestrated events, which will allow them to (theoretically) tank the price. Maybe one day the SEC will take notice and do something about this? ■

On to the next play, friends. The game isn't over ■■