Just a random question, please deal with my single wrinkle if it's not worthy:

If we purchase GME through a broker then register those, does this reduce the shares available for their MM to trade & short more effectively than purchasing directly through CS?

We know 100% of GME shares are actively being traded which I think would mean there are no more available to go to CS and ask for => So the MMs are using only their allotted stock to fraud.

Should those of us, that are more easily able like through Fudge-lickity, continue to get our shares through a broker? Then register of course, reducing the stock pile available on that side.

I know there's a risk of at the time of MOrASS but I also slightly feel like daring them to mess with APes again.

As I'm thinking about this I'm afraid to think the split dividend may have worked in their favor if this happens to be the case.
