Papa just had a small emotional breakdown and crisis of confidence.-----

Hello my ape brethren and sistren, u/Cryptids4Sale here. You may know me as the "Pantheon" guy, or perhaps even the "Insomnia-Posting" guy, or even the "Sliding Down the Fireman's Pole Using Nothing but the Power of My Ass-Cheek's Grip" guy (a title I've just made up now, but there's still a remote chance - no matter how unlikely - you may recognize me that way... But odds are you probably don't know me at all, given the size of this sub vs. the traction my posts gain in these parts.

To cut to the chase, I posted two DDs here right around a month ago, "Pantheon Part I" and "Pantheon Part II". These DDs served as a deep-dive into Ken Griffin's life, and as a compilation of all the powerful connections he has in the stock market. In fact, these posts were re-uploads of the exact same DD which I had previously posted under the name, "Friends in High Places," which experienced some odd issues that led to me taking the posts down entirely.

At the end of re-writing Pantheon, I decided I would try to make it into an ongoing series about the enormous host of powerful people in charge of Wall Street (hence the name "Pantheon" in the first place). But, that clearly has yet to happen yet. Don't even try, if you look for them now, you won't find them. They still aren't done.

And they aren't done because I believe I had what the kids refer to as an "extended depressive episode," due to some struggles in my personal life. As someone fresh out of college and job hunting, my already relatively shaky self-esteem hit a low point after seeing the re-uploads fail to gain the traction I had hoped for (part II, originally hitting 1k upvotes, only reached something like 8 on re-upload). And to be transparent, I don't say this because I have some over-inflated sense of self-importance or anything, I can live with people not liking my posts or not feeling they're "worthy" of rising up the page... But it seems apparent to me that because the posts DID get so much positive attention the first time around (even though they ended up largely buried by different posts), that this is information that the community does deem valuable and relevant to the cause.

So I'm going back to work on Part III. After conversations with u/disoriented_llama (big thanks, btw, this Ape runs a little-known DD archive on r/TheGloryHodl, absolutely recommend giving that sub some love with the hard work that's being put into preserving our glorious informational hoard we have here), I've decided that the right thing to do is keep plowing forward with research and serving the community how I can.

But I also want to leave you with some thoughts and warnings before I go...

My upload of PANTHEON PART II was recently taken down after being flagged as "spam," and I've heard of a lot of other sketchy things going on behind the scenes with DD being removed. I believe this is very likely Reddit at large, and has nothing to do with this sub or the mods here. What I'm saying is, check on your content every now and again to make sure it's still here, and make sure your account isn't marked NSFW unless it absolutely needs to be so that it's easy for eyes to see what you've posted. We don't want good DD going under for strange reasons. I've never been one to give too much weight to conspiracies, but I would also say in relation to something as big as this, it's better to be safe than sorry.

And finally: if you're struggling either with FUD or with issues in your personal life, please absolutely try reaching out to other apes in the community. I can genuinely say I've never met a more supportive group of people. I MEAN that. I went to school in the Midwest of the US, where people are stereotyped as being ridiculously kind and friendly, and in middle school when my grandfather died, I texted friends to ask if I could vent and talked to them to try to feel better, and never got an answer. Here, I stop posting for a few weeks after putting up 2 B-tier DD posts, and people are rooting through my post history and messaging me unprompted to ask how I'm doing. Apes support apes. Don't feel like you're alone or have no one else to reach out to. And, if you know someone in this community is having a rough time, REACH OUT TO THEM. That's where the strength of this community lies. We all individually like the stock for OUR OWN reasons, but support is something we can all share.

In fact, I hope to write a post on coping with loneliness while waiting for the MOASS, so be on the lookout for that. And, again, be on the lookout for PANTHEON PART III, COMING SOON!
