

Title: Do you think the amc bots are using reverse psychology on us?

Author: dvsanon

Created 2021-07-23 09:58:32 UTC

Permalink: /r/Autisticats/comments/opz86c/do_you_think_the_amc_bots_are_using_reverse/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/Autisticats/comments/opz86c/do_you_think_the_amc_bots_are_using_reverse/

There seems to be a whole "exposing" the obvious bots telling us to sell amc at 300. Memes, pictures of the posts on youtube. It's all over the amc friendly subs. I bet you have seen them. The whole campaign basically is telling us to do the opposite of the obvious bots by NOT selling at ~300.

My thought is, at this stage everyone knows they are trying to manipulate us so we think we are clever and do the opposite of what they tell us to do. But I think they are good at manipulation and know we think this way, so they tell us to do what they want us to do in an obvious way. So if they DON'T want us to sell amc at 300 but just want more people to fomo buy or flip their GME to AMC because they plan on tanking the AMC price. They make it obvious that bots ask us to sell at 300 so we won't? That make sense?

I dunno I laugh at this, maybe I'm overthinking I feel like I'm the guy from Princess Bride here.

You guys do you, but for me honestly if AMC price equals GME price(IE:AMC is ~300, and GME is ~300) i'm gonna sell AMC and flip most of it to GME because I think GME is a better company and has a real plan for the future and by the end of MOASS I think the gme squeeze will go higher. Plus I'm more of a Cinamark ape myself. The rest of the profit I'll sit on and be ready to buy GME if fear hits the markets. Also AMC CEO got caught on a zoom call with no pants on makes me question them too, unprofessional doesn't give me confidence in them. GME cleaned house of the CFO(maybe was a HF puppet?) and is bringing in new people, while AMC CEO is now Chairman of the board AND the CEO, a bit of a conflict.