Recently, I have seen posts about pizzas being delivered to Gamestop Employees. I spent a little bit of time reading in the official Gamestop Subreddit. There appears to be a disconnect between Management and Frontline Workers. In addition, there are issues involving elderly people buying steam cards while being manipulated in scams, and these scam having a negative effect on the Employees Pro-Membership Sales Ratio. The Shareholders of this company can be a loud enough voice to change an instore policy to do some good. I think a push for Anti-Scam Warnings being posted in Giftcard sections for the protection of the Elderly and Vulnerable, and the removal of giftcard sales counting towards the Pro-Membership-to-Sales Ratio for more accurate financials and for the sake of the Employees. I'm curious to hear what you guys have to say as Owners of Gamestop.
