Ryan Cohen and co. have been extremely careful to this point, and they wouldn't do anything someone could point to and say they caused the big bad thing to happen.

In truth, the DRS movement was completely independently started by their shareholders individually deciding to take their shares out of a system that was abusing the company they are invested in. Therefore, this is a countdown for those short on their stock, which they have mentioned before. Keeping an update liquidity of a highly illiquid asset is a must for them to cover their ass post big bad event
