My brain is too smooth to understand and to explain Ichimoku Clouds analysis. If you want some wrinkles, here's a start: https://www.fidelity.com/learning-center/trading-investing/technical-analysis/technical-indicator-guide/ichimoku-cloud

I've been looking at GME on the 1 hour time frame with the Ichimoku indicator for the past month, or so. Again, I have no verifiable information to pass on (and I sincerely apologize to any Ichimoku gurus if I am butchering this), but I see 3 distinct times where the TenkanSen (blue line) has crossed the KinjunSen (red line) and the stock is trading well above the cloud, indicating a strong positive trend.

Take if for what you will. NOT financial advice. I'm just an ■ that likes pictures, has ■■ and looks for bias while waiting for the **■.
