So I am the smoothest out of all. I found a great paying job for my partner at JPMorgan, I had an idea there would be restrictions with regulations etc, but I am not allowed to hold GME/any stock in computershare while my partner is employed. The problem is I am being forced to transfer the shares to an approved brokerage (Fidel etc), but I need preclearance to sell. So I can't transfer fractional shares, they'll be liquidated. So I sought preclearance to sell my fractional share from computershare and was not allowed. So I have to close my account but I can't close my account because I can't sell the fractional share. I can't really purchase to round up because the price moves.

This also means I literally cannot sell unless approved, which let's face it, they aren't going to do.
