I bought a bunch of gme call options in December expiring feb 18 with strikes from 160 down to 125 . They were all ATM at the time and are pretty much worthless now other than maybe my 125-135 calls unless something drastic happens in the next week and a half. It was about 20k worth that I could have bought shares with or waited and got much cheaper with lower strikes. My suggestion is to buy further out or wait longer after an SLD cycle to buy options until the shorts have driven the price down to the bottom which is a couple months after the quarterly SLD cycle. I learned my lesson on timing these things. Just wanted to share my experience. Good luck apes. DRS
