Take this with a grain of salt. This is pure speculation and not financial advice. Honestly, this is wild speculation.

TL/DR of TL/DR: Funds are going to fear monger the markets to gain back their profits through shorting the entire market.

Whatever happens, hold $GME! ■■■■

TL/DR: Funds are going to short the market, sell their long positions to cover their short positions, create a bearish narrative and fear monger the public by spreading negative sentiment through coordinated media campaigns. Then they'll profit billions from their shorts and buy back long positions at a discount later. Also, they'll hope $GME and their other short positions will go down in the process to recoup even more of their losses.

The Beef: Suits are fucked on $GME. They came at us with everything and failed. And now, every move of theirs on $GME is currently being scrutinized by the public and SEC. So they need to explore other options.

They have no other choice but to liquidate their long positions to cover their short positions.... and they're going to use this to their advantage. THEIR NEXT BIG PLAY: They're going short the market to make back their billions. I believe the suits are going to purposely tank the market through a massive, coordinated sell-off. They're going to sell all of their long positions to cover their shorts at a future date, and then they're going to promote fear on wall street and to the rest of the world. You're going to see increased media campaigns about "market volatility, uncertainty, sell off" on all the major news stations and newswires, promoted by the funds. They're going to push an entire bearish narrative and create worldwide negative sentiment. They're also going to have massive shorts on the market while they do this to put them in a position to make back billions. Once the market is down, they'll then buy back securities, change their narrative to bullish, and drive the markets up, riding their positions to the top. They control the "market media" as we've already seen. We've also seen how they've been able to control the narrative on $GME. And with all of this going on, they're going to also hope $GME goes down with the market, as well as their other positions, so they can profit even more.

This sell-off will be a perpetuating cycle, a self fulfilling prophecy. When the big funds sell, other fund will have no other choice but to sell too in order to save their profits. The narrative will spread and spread. I know this sounds convoluted and complex, but we've seen what these funds are capable of. And I can't think of any other scenario where these hedge funds come out positive for the year. I hope I'm wrong. And if I'm right, I hope the public realizes what they're doing.

So whatever happens, HOLD $GME!!!! ■■■■
