It can get lonely as an ape but there are so many out there in the world apart of this in some form or another. Just think who is along side you reading the same DD you're reading, upvoting memes you're upvoting, snarking at comments you're snarking at. There are obvious individuals within the company we know are somewhere on here lingering. Poppa Ryan Cohen already told us even when he's on the toilet he's working, and what does everyone of us do on the toilet? Hell I'd bet my ass a decent portion of you are on a toilet reading this very sentence right now. But other than the obvious one's think about all the the possible others, we're talking academics, politicians, movie stars, veterans, doctors, lawyers, famous musicians, the number is just too large at this point for that possibility not to be there. Just awesome to think about honestly. But beware false prophets, among the grand mass will also linger evil, that sneeze was too great a sting for them not to keep a closer eye on us now. All I can say is you're not alone, there is too many people on this side of the table now for any lingering effects not to breakaway at their skyscraper foundations brick by brick. Eventually their castles will topple just like it has over and over again since the dawn of man. The only way out is humility but I fear they are so far gone they are willing to destroy themselves on the way out. Time will only tell...
