

Title: It's Strange, The Only Price Action Complaints I See Are People Complaining About The Complainers

I'm not trying to complain about the people complaining about the complainers, but I am wondering if you're experiencing this too...

This whole ride since January 2021 there have been dips and "crashes" in the price. While this happens I will see a lot of comments, tweets and posts about how apes are buying up the dip. There will also be posts where OPs say something like, "Is everyone still here?" or "Everyone is complaining/panicking about the price, and you all are bi*%^#$$. The price doesn't matter!" I happen to agree that the price is manipulated, but I'm always confused because I haven't seen many people complaining at all. They make it sound like the subs are full of people losing their sh*% and the place is burning down. Has anyone else noticed this?

As for me, I'm going to call those posts FUD from now on. It seems like they are trying to subtly make us think everyone else is heading for the exit and maybe we should too. I've done my own research. I'm not selling. I'm buying shares. I'm DRSing. I'm a Gamestop customer. Not financial advice
