What if illegal naked shorting is not a bug, but a feature?

What do you do, if you have been printing money as fast as the damn printers can go for YEARS but you know that if you even fart during a discussion about rates, the whole card castle comes down?

Simple. You get your buddies to "print" shares just as fast to suppress prices across the market, and prevent the entire market from doing the "Zimbabwe moon" in unison.

Ken was asked to do it. He thinks he is the hero in the story.

Thoughts?
