Kohl's, Advanced Auto Parts, Dollar general, and Macy's.... All have products that would look great on Amazon, right? Is ryan cohen calling out cellar boxing across U.S. retail companies, as well as possibly leaving us a clue? WHY DID HE CHOOSE TO USE THESE COMPANIES AS AN EXAMPLE?? He mentions them all when comparing BBBY CEO's compensation. Did RC choose BBBY because its ceo was being paid highest of them all?

I cant find it, but i just read a DD this morning about how Kohl's is currently being cellar boxed by Jeff Bezo's entourage. The DD claimed that current members of Kohl's were the same heads involved with SEARS AND JC PENNY.

(If someone shares a link to this dd ill edit my post to contain it. PLS&TY;)

I couldnt wait to make this post before doing more research. Hopefully we get eyes on this but ill be spending my day diving down the rabbit hole of each of these companies, their ceo's, cfo's, their board of directors, and said individuals history with being involved in large cap companies that file for bankruptcy after 2 years of their participation.

I speculate that RC knows cellar boxing is happening within BBBY, Kohls, Advanced Auto Parts, Dollar Tree, and Macy's but chose BBBY because he sees inflated CEO compensation as a final signal from criminals that their diabolical cellar boxing plan is about to succeed. More research needed
