Look kids. I wanna talk to you about a few of these here tweets, K? I've spent quite awhile with people over time trying to get to the bottom of what company, production/distribution or otherwise was referenced. This has taken 3.5ish months of my life and it's the most fun I've ever had learning.

I've done the research on a lot of them going over the frogs with proper DD so people can understand that was the game all along.

This was a multiplayer game of a different kind. Fundamentally, a corporate game of thrones.

Interesting enough I was asked what a frog is, and what's the pattern? Well, you see, out of the whole whole indexed list of tweets ... 600+ of them, these are the ones that had power up logos in the videos. the power ups were clues as to find knowledge there.

It all started with learning about Frivolously Related Output Gaps, or FROG, in the mcdonalds fundamentals. It had - earnings , + debt , and +0 ability to earn more because covid. Transportation lines were all time low too. When going into the actual information presented, there was no justifiable reason that the chart should show growth. The company's revenue output didn't make sense. I wrote about that here in this superstonk post.

Why would a financial analyst bring these things up? Why put a breakfast club tweet with multiple power ups? Why daft punk's ear? Why not push the red button?

The idea here is to figure out the riddle of what each tweet is referencing. Each of the tweets looked up only had so many names or topics in common.

MOST of these have direct partnerships with amazon, "coincidentally" ...
