I was starting to learn about stocks so I could hopefully earn some passive income. This was a month before the sneeze. I was too busy at the time to learn about GME, but I did notice the waves DFV was making. I couldn't understand why a regular person would pass up on a potential 60+ million dollar pay day. I bashed this guy to my wife, what an idiot I thought. What plebian in the right mind would not jump on the chance for this life changing money? What a dummy head I thought, BUT it was this courage act of DFV that ignited my desire to understand more. Then what does this beautiful ape do? He quadruples down. That's the moment I knew this was something bigger, something far larger than my smooth brain could comprehend. So I bought a couple shares thinking the rocket was going to take off and I wanted to get in a little on it. Fast forward to now and I have my life savings invested in GME, with an average cost basis around the $180, spend 4-6 hours every day on Reddit University and loving every minute I get to spend with all of you beautiful apes.
