Not sure if I'm correct or not and may need some wrinkled brain apes to look at it u/crind. Back in May/June which is when I first noticed it, during the rollover period there were a lot of new call options been opened like today there are a lot of brand new calls open for $410 and up to $510 range all the way to 2024. During august when we were expecting the big jump of the rollover period we experienced the same in the week of august 24th and never again until now. I know that there is a "roll over period" but they can also roll over whenever they want if I'm not mistaken. I've been paying close attention to this new addition of calls and also puts on our beloved stonk and I find it odd the fact lots of them are created during roll over period or super early like I believe is happening now..... any wrinkled brain apes can elaborate on this??
