

Title: Both Amazon and Etsy have announced transaction fee increases in the past few weeks and 3rd party resellers are in revolt. Is this a potential opportunity for GameStop?

Author: deebrown68

Created 2022-04-14 11:55:19 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/u3fs9c/both_amazon_and_etsy_have_announced_transaction/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/u3fs9c/both_amazon_and_etsy_have_announced_transaction/

For those who haven't heard, in a couple of weeks, both Amazon and Etsy will be implementing new fees to it's sellers. These independent merchants depend on their platforms and fulfillment services... and Etsy sellers are so pissed, they've organized a strike <https://etsystrike.org/> . I wonder if any Amazon sellers will organize similar actions?

To quantify just how big this 3rd party marketplace is for Amazon, last year, sellers paid Amazon about $103 billion in fees, which made up about 22% of the company's revenue.

With the huge increase in GameStop's distribution capabilities over the past year, does anyone know if GameStop has any plans to try to capture some of this business?

Correct me if I am wrong but I THINK this business model would be completely separate from the upcoming digital marketplace.

By the way, Rob Kalin, Etsy's founder, tweeted this which appears to be his first tweek since Dec 2014.

<https://preview.redd.it/zxeuwjajght81.png?width=731&format=png&auto=webp&s=68852662d6954082af684787ac830d790ca98117>

<https://twitter.com/rokali/status/1513609621323276292?cxt=HHwWiICz-cv7tYEqAAAA>

Think a few Apes should reach out to him to see if he's familiar with GME's plans?